'The New Forest Airfields during WW2' by Dr Henry Goodall Friday 13th July 2018

The twelve airfields of the New Forest area played an important part in WW2 helping to secure the eventual victory, especially with the support of D-Day. With the coming of peace, the airfields played their part in bringing home thousands of service personnel and opened up the new air routes across the globe. They were involved in every aspect of air warfare from research and development, training, flying on both defensive and offensive missions and supporting the operations of secret agents and Resistance Organisations in occupied Europe.
