'Nevil Shute Norway' by Stephen Robson Friday 10th January 2020

Aeronautical engineer Nevil Shute Norway is known world wide as an author under his first two names. Some of his 24 books, were made into films or TV series such as Lonely Road, Pied Piper and more recently a Town Like Alice and On the Beach. His aviation and engineering experiences provided the background for many of his novels and in 1948 he flew to Australia in a small 4 seat aircraft in search of more material and not long after he emigrated to live near Melbourne. As chief engineer on the privately built R100 he found himself jobless when the airship was scrapped following the R101 disaster and this led to him co-founding Airspeed. Wartime work included secret projects and even some time as a war reporter.
